JOCKEYED OUT

Right Hon. Arthur Meighen presents his compliments to Hon. H. H. Stevens. Out of the report of Mr. Stevens' Press Conference Commission emerged a bill to amend the Industrial Disputes Act. It duly passed the Commons, but the Senate, three to two, refused to take a vote on it. On motion of Mr. Meighen, Government leader in the Senate, who agreed with Mr. Moore of the opposition that there was "nothing in the bill worth saving."

Liberal Senators evidently thought that the Government's opinion of the report of its own Commission, there was no reason why they should put a minority vote in favor of the Government. Mr. Meighen, however, had a chance for the party leadership, but he is not going to help Mr. Stevens up the ladder if he knows it.

ACTION VERSUS HOPE

Premier Baldwin has rejected Lloyd George's plan for constructive action to provide employment and restore industry and business in Great Britain. He says the plan is no better than that of the Government.

Britain, it will be noted, has two plans, each calling for direct action by the national authority to get business moving faster.

The difference is that while the Government of Canada has also turned down constructive schemes from all outside sources, it has developed none of its own instead, and is waiting for time, chance, or Providence to send along prosperity with none too content hope that it will arrive before long.

Canada was actually extruding more reconstruction effort in 1931 than it is in 1933. At that time, provincial and municipal works were carrying on relief works schemes with federal assistance. These have long since been abandoned, in favor of the "dole."

The construction policy of the Canadian government is leading the provinces mainly as a profit, spending a paltry $100,000,000 in putting up a few public buildings, and passing legislation to divide up poverty.

Whatever it may amount to in detail and in effect, the people in the old lands are to be congratulated in that the Government at least recognizes the need and the possibility of constructive action and has a program which is being put into effect. It must be a poor one if it is not better than none.

TAKING RECESS

Paraguay and Bolivia have signed an armistice and are taking steps to bring it into effect. They are negotiating a treaty of peace. Ninety men were killed in the fighting. The fighting was in the Chaco when the fighting stopped—ten thousand fewer than have been killed in the three years' war. Popular demonstrations in the two capitals rivalled those which greeted the outbreak of hostilities three years ago.

Paraguay appears to have got much the better of the fighting, and will probably get most of the disputed territory. The gain for it will be worth the cost by no means likely, while Bolivia may be little poorer for the territory it wanted but does not get. Nothing has been published concerning the war, but it was worth fighting for, even as a money proposition, leaving the human losses out of account; this was strictly and solely a war for territory.

For outsiders the important result of the war was to show how little the League of Nations can do to prevent outbreaks of war to quell one, and how completely power depends upon the will of nations. Regulatory agreements mean little when two countries want to fight.

Likely enough the Paraguayans and Bolivians will go at it again when another generation has grown up—just as the countries in Europe are threatening to do they have been fighting intermittently ever since the war for fifty years, and the national temperaments have not changed much in the meantime.

IT CAN BE DONE

Saskatoon citizens paid the fine of a dozen men convicted there of "riding the rods" in an attempt to get to Regina and join the "on to Ottawa" excursionists.

Since they held their first tag day in Vancouver the "marchers" have collected $1,500 in cash in voluntary contributions. Saturday they were entertained at a picnic by Regina service clubs, whose members were considering plans to forward them to Manitoba in motor cars, thus averting the threatened clash with the police.

There is no room for doubt as to whether popular sympathy is on the side of men who ask for the right to earn a living as other men do, by working for wages. The reception that has been accorded the migrants all along the line is proof of this. At the same time, they have been helped everywhere, on a scale which bespeaks a very general approval of their consistency and desire to work, and an equal conviction that they can be given the employment and the wages they have been asking for.

Western people do not admit that all the work needed to be done, or worth doing in Canada, has been done. Neither do they take any stock in the argument that wage employment cannot be financed. They remember the time when Canada furnished a half-million men for destructive operations in Europe, over a period of four years. They remember also that nobody got up in parliament in those days to say the thing couldn't be done. It was accepted as something to be done, and was done.

What was done in war time can be done in peace time, and would be done if it will do it was present in the national imagination.

Forty Years Ago

From the Files of The Edmonton Bulletin

The old Bulletin building is being torn down and removed. This building was long a prominent landmark in Edmonton, but had outgrown its usefulness and was to be removed. It was the first business building erected in Edmonton outside the Hudson Bay post, and was completed in December of 1874. It was used by the present proprietor as a store until 1884. The first issue of the Bulletin was printed in it. The first issue was dated April 1884 to October 1884. It was printed in the Bulletin, which finally outgrew it and was compelled to seek more roomy and comfortable quarters. The present office was built on the original site of the old building, which was removed year ago to make room for it. No tears are being shed over its disappearance nor is there any intention of mourning its passing, or in remembrance of the past. It served its purpose well in its day and now that its day has passed it is being torn down to make way for the necessities of the present and future, the better and more to the credit of all concerned in it. Those who have considered it an eyesore for the past year will be surprised to learn that it was considered rather a smart building and somewhat in advance of its time when it was erected, being the first building in the country to sport 1912 glass in its windows, the regular size of glass in the country previously being the home of the lumber in it was from the first season's custom cutting of a saw mill on the Upper Saskatchewan, all lumber previously being sawn by hand.

The Passing Show

By J. S. COWPER

I was away "buckin' up" the Alberta Coal Branch all last week. It isn't the easiest job in the world. You talk for an hour and a half or more on what you conceive to be the problems of the present and future of the coal industry of the province, only to find when question time arrives that what had been the subject of the questioner all this time was how someone in the dawn of the century voted upon some dead and gone issue that you never bothered to load into your memory.

The most hopeless moment came after I had been arguing some point, that the amount of money spent on the two relief camps for the Branch—now over $100,000—would have built a much-needed highway up the Branch had the money been spent on contract labor at standard rates. I thought I made the reasoning as clear as could be, only to have a chap in the audience with an office man rather than a miner, get up and say that on this compilation the road would cost twelve million dollars and where was I going to get the money from?

It recalled a youthful miner when a new minister came to the church of my boyhood and preached a sermon on "The Bible as an Inspired Book."

Probably it was the first time I had heard an intellectual argument in the pulpit. It made an impression on me so great that I still recall the main outline of it after forty years. The preacher remarked on the significance that these books, the origins of which were not known, had survived the ravages of time, the cause of some essential and eternal qualities of appeal, comfort and guidance they possessed. He reviewed their history, their growth, their philosophy, law, ethics, poetry and drama—and pointed out the potent fact that those nations that had adopted the Bible as an inspired guide were the nations that had grown great in power, influence and wealth.

I wanted to tell the preacher how much I had appreciated his sermon, but I said only the usual and abashed young minister: "I don't care what you say. I still believe in the Bible."

At Cadomin, Mr. J. R. Craig, who employs 45 men in a lumber camp cutting lumber, mine props and the like, was a member of the Cadomin Coal Co. Mr. Fred W. Falkner and myself in his car for a ten-mile drive out to his camp.

It was not for a joy-ride, though the scenery through which we passed at 6000 feet was magnificent beyond words. It was to show how little expense would be required to connect Cadomin, Mountain Park and Leduc with the Jasper Highway. If the federal government would consent to build a 12-mile connecting road through Jasper Park.

The road over which we travelled from Cadomin to a point within a few miles of the boundary had been built by Mr. Craig to assist his logging operations. It had cost him about $1000 a mile and it was a character satisfactory to the residents. The road was to be built from his road to the highway at Miette Hot Springs. It was to be built from the end of his road to the highway at Miette Hot Springs over several times—the last time only a few months ago. He says he would be willing to build the road to the Hot Springs for $20,000.

Whether built by him or by some other person at a higher figure, this concession should be granted by Ottawa and the money would be granted by the incoming government.

There are slaty camps at Cadomin, Leduc and Mountain Park. There would be two hundred if a highway outlet was constructed.

Non-ferrous camps pay less. Minimum fees are $20 a year. If a road was built these 80 cars would pay at least $1,200 in license fees. Increased gasoline tax from increased mileage would mean a saving of $24,000 in license fees would pay interest at 5 p.c. on $24,000—more than enough to build the road. With a road built in this way, the gas tax would be paid in full, and the gas tax would be paid in full.

This has nothing to do with the just claim of the residents along the lower Branch to be given highway connection with Edmonton and Leduc. No park outlet in the upper and can take the place of a road up the Branch that will be open all the year round.

It isn't too hard to visualize the time when lovers of scenic beauty, tourists in search of a new place to visit, fishing and hunting parties and commercial coach lines will find use for the road that he was unable to get an outlet at the Leduc through Jasper Park.

In a later article I'd like to tell of some of the other things I've learned on this visit—the mode of life of the British dwellers, their pleasures and their grievances, their freedom and their tyrannies and their many of their subjects.

The Ottawa Journal, the Montreal Gazette, and some other folk who have depended on the tobergen, polar bears and walrus to defend the Hudson Bay route, will be led to learn that so responsible a British publication as the Liverpool Journal of Commerce features an article on the last report of the Imperial Shipping Commission, which says that the British steamship line is the only one that has not been established of the route to and from Churchill as a regular trade route rather than as the "experiment" it has heretofore appeared to be.

Five French statesmen have tried to form governments during the past three days. After endeavoring to get a minority together each one has informed the French President that he was unable to do so.

The difference between French statesmen and statesmen of other countries with which we are acquainted is that when the French statesmen believe they are not able to give France good government they are honest enough to say so.

Problems of The Expectant Mother

By DOCTOR FRANK MCCOY

The Dionne quintuplets are the world's most famous babies and probably many of my readers have listened to their first birthday party as given over the radio. These five famous babies have served to bring to our attention the fact that babies are a source of universal interest.

Today's mother of a family of five will be written for those expectant mothers who are faced with certain problems of the proper feeding regimen. Probably the question most often asked by the expectant mother who writes to me is how best to avoid nausea, particularly called "morning sickness." This is best avoided, as a rule, by a careful diet, the symptom usually yields satisfactorily to the proper feeding regimen. The general diet advisable for the expectant mother must include an adequate amount of meat each day which provides protein. The protein of the meat may be supplied by a diet that secured from one or two eggs. The next most important foods are the non-starchy vegetables, such as both raw and cooked. I particularly recommend plenty of the leafy green vegetables which are good sources of iron. The iron is necessary for an adequate amount in helping to prevent sluggish circulation. In the past, it has been customary to use too large an amount of the heavy meats, the mistaken notion being that the mother must "eat for two." I find that in actual practice, it is seldom necessary to advise any particular diet, but in fact, a diet of the kind I am using to be used a large quantity of this particular kind of food.

Another common question deals with the increase in weight which is normal at the beginning to the end of the gestation period, a gain of 20 pounds is generally considered normal. In special cases, however, the weight is overweight at the start, it is often helpful to keep the diet arranged in such a way that very little gain in weight is secured. Moderate caloric restriction is the best method in controlling the diet so as to encourage a weight of six to seven pounds in the infant at birth.

A fairly common question refers to the best way of protecting the mother's teeth during this important period. I advise that the expectant mother visit her dentist as early as possible at which time any teeth which need filling should be given attention and the teeth properly cleaned. The best method of protecting the teeth is one which provides plenty of calcium. Food calcium may be obtained from orange juice, milk and the given leafy vegetables. In addition to this, the good old calcium salt, which is eaten it is also necessary for her to obtain sunbath as the ultra violet rays in the sunlight will enable her to make use of the calcium, or to metabolize it. If sunshine is impossible, then a vitamin D preparation may be used to take the place of the sunbath. The following would be manufactured in the city following the exposure of the skin to sunlight. The same diet which protects the mother's teeth to build strong teeth in the infant, so that both benefit.

Remember that I have a special article for the expectant mother which gives her some dietetic suggestions and outlines of the exercises for her to take. I also have an article on Baby's Lactation. I suggest that those who are interested to get to the article in the hot of this newspaper, enclosing one large, self-addressed envelope and ten cents. Also enclosing a stamped and addressed envelope for the mother should be protected during this important period by placing her under the supervision of a doctor who will be able to make special tests from time to time to give her a full and complete picture of her health during this most important period in her life.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

QUESTION—Harry B. asks: "Are ferments necessary for the digestion of food?"

ANSWER—The digestive movement is necessary in making complicated food in the food after being eaten, breaking it down and passing it on to the blood stream.

After the work of the digestive ferments, food becomes something that the body can use.

QUESTION—Evelyn O. inquires: "Do you believe a good permanent wave will injure the scalp or the color of the hair?"

ANSWER: A good permanent should not injure the scalp in any way, but too many permanent waves may affect the hair by causing it to become brittle and thus interfering with the coloring of the hair shafts; but this would not affect the roots so that the hair would grow out again with the natural color.

On June 19 many people may give way to a temptation to tease, or play pranks. Businessmen or women, will make a mistake in being inaccessible to their own efforts, or in an interview. At social gatherings any supercilious manner in contacting other people, or the help, will be a grave mistake. Married and engaged couples, and those in the first stages of courtship, will find this an auspicious day for sharing confidences.

If a woman and June 19 is your birthday, your "pep" and enthusiasm may give you a naturally born organizer. Your husband probably will idolize you, and fulfill your fondest expectations.

The child born on June 19, when it attains its majority, may display a stability of character that will attract attention and admiration.

If a man and June 19 is your natal day, you are discriminating, and have a fine sense of justice.

He was then appointed military governor of Quebec city and later of the whole area. In 1764 he was appointed first civil governor of the Province of Quebec, which office he held until 1786. From the beginning he recognized the importance of so administering the state that the new French subjects of the crown would be converted into loyal British subjects. He directed everything in his power to mitigate those sufferings inevitable at the close of a devastating war. He distinguished himself by his opposition to all representative measures which might have been passed to subordinate the French. He also inaugurated the policy of conciliation which later brought about the Quebec Act. His championship of the French cause made him unpopular with the British and the French alike. He was forced to surrender, after a long siege, to a combined French and Spanish force. He was then tried by a court martial but he was acquitted and he was made a full general.

Western Route Threatened

When the private grain trade functioned alone, without government interference, Vancouver's major industry, wheat growing and exporting, with the Government proposing a step which is foredoomed to vast failure, that one turns with relief to the old route.

The Vancouver Board of Trade, Vancouver Merchants Exchange and the National Council of Canada are expected to make representations today or tomorrow to Premier Bennett concerning the proposed formation of an all-province grain board in Canada.

These organizations know what they are talking about. They are moving to Vancouver. They know how much the grain trade means to the province. They know that hundreds of people would be thrown out of work if the private grain trade were taken over by a government board as Premier Bennett's bill proposes. They know or feel the strongly suspect that if a Grain Board came into existence Vancouver would not be better off a grain port than it has now. Mr. McFarland came into the picture. Vancouver has been losing out to the Eastern route.

LABOR RESEVES UPON POWER FACT

Council Decides All Cards Must Appear on Table

Full Study With Report From Special Committee Will Precede Any Labor Action.

All the cards must be placed on the table before members of the Edmonton Trades and Labor Council will endorse or condemn the renewal of the agreement between the City and the Calgary Power Company. It was decided at a meeting of that body on Monday evening.

Debate Matheson precipitated a debate, when he moved that the council endorse the entering into an agreement "similar to that which exists between the Company and the city of Lethbridge."

Alfred Farnillo, secretary of the council, did not see the necessity for any such action. He stated that he was prepared to vote on the question of the agreement before the council was to vote on the question of the agreement.

A similar stand was taken by Carl Berg, president of the council, who thought that organized labor should know to what extent the different trades employed in the generation of power would be affected through renewal. "There was no need," he said, "to rush into any resolution at present."

E. E. Roper was of the opinion that no action should be taken by the council until a full study of the situation had been made. There was nothing concrete before the public, he said, so there was nothing to discuss.

TO HEAR COMMITTEE

It was decided that a special committee would be appointed for several months in connection with the power question, the committee being in a report for the next meeting of the council.

COOL, SHOWERY WEATHER HERE

Continuation of cool, showery weather for Tuesday and Wednesday is predicted by the Dominion meteorological service.

Several notable efforts were made during Monday by the sun to chase away the rain and to do this the mercury was shoved up to 62, the highest mark attained since the hour period.

The lowest point was reached Tuesday, when it was 3 a.m. The minimum temperature Monday was the same as on the corresponding day a year ago, namely, 34.

On Wednesday the sun will rise at 4:54 a.m. and set at 9:06 p.m., a little later and a little earlier than on the corresponding day a year ago, namely, 4:46 a.m. and 8:56 p.m.

At midnight the mercury stood at 50, while hourly readings were 49, 48, 47, 46, 45, 44, 43, 42, 41, 40, 39, 38, 37, 36, 35, 34, 33, 32, 31, 30, 29, 28, 27, 26, 25, 24, 23, 22, 21, 20, 19, 18, 17, 16, 15, 14, 13, 12, 11, 10, 9, 8, 7, 6, 5, 4, 3, 2, 1, 0, -1, -2, -3, -4, -5, -6, -7, -8, -9, -10, -11, -12, -13, -14, -15, -16, -17, -18, -19, -20, -21, -22, -23, -24, -25, -26, -27, -28, -29, -30, -31, -32, -33, -34, -35, -36, -37, -38, -39, -40, -41, -42, -43, -44, -45, -46, -47, -48, -49, -50, -51, -52, -53, -54, -55, -56, -57, -58, -59, -60, -61, -62, -63, -64, -65, -66, -67, -68, -69, -70, -71, -72, -73, -74, -75, -76, -77, -78, -79, -80, -81, -82, -83, -84, -85, -86, -87, -88, -89, -90, -91, -92, -93, -94, -95, -96, -97, -98, -99, -100.

Change Made In Campus Landscape

University of Alberta grads returning to their alma mater this week to attend successive conventions of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association and the Society of Technical Agriculture will note a change in the campus landscape.

Medical building, originally planned to be the site of the library building, has been cleared of brick and laid out as a garden path. A diagonal path across the park will find favor with students who formerly found the wetter of trees and brick impassable.

Beginning a New Series of Modern Youth In a Gay Vacation Colony

CHAPTER I.

It was July, the hour 8 o'clock in the morning. Locusts sang in the high elms bordering the winding road that capped the ridge of hills. The deep blue sky was brushed over with wisps of clouds, and there was in the air a threat of the intense heat which would presently brood over the whole countryside in the quiet of mid-day. A bridle path wandered through the stillness, and there was a chuckle-hush in the deep places, where brooks ran over copper-colored stones and larks hopped from fern fringing grass, gazed into a knot at the nape of her neck. Her white linen jodhpurs, her casually open white shirt, set off her looks to perfection. Yet there was something almost startling in the contrast between the darkness of those eyes and the fairness of her skin and hair. Katharine, in fact, was a mass of contradictions, and was occasionally proud of it. She was a girl with head and humble, arrogant and gentle, who spent her life suffering awfully because of the contrariness of her warring emotions.

This morning was a fair example. She had come to the riding club—Michael Heather's club—fully expecting Michael to accompany her on her morning canter. For weeks now—ever since the early part of April, actually—that had been the thought of Katharine. Katharine no longer needed the service of a groom. She handled the little mare now with spirit and authority, but it had been Michael's habit to mount his roan and lead her along the paths. This particular morning another pupil had been at the stables before her—a plump, dark, lusciously pretty girl whom Katharine recognized as Sally Moon, one of the girls who had gone to the boarding school at Inuvik, which lay below her now in the shimmering haze of morning.

town center, but a small group of two or three men took a trip to make every triangular conversation seem a competition in sex.

In a good humor now, Katharine looked over the rail fence, the first few steps of the street of late which would presently cross the Shore road, and she looked at the street.

This far out it was a broad ribbon highway, flanked by red and white gas stations and an occasional mammoth sign. A mile or two back from the Shore, it became Inverness Main Street, with tall maple shading old white houses with green shutters.

Further down still was the bank, the Presbyterian church, the library, Miss Matilda's nursery school, and a really store. Inverness was a old village, quiet, comfortable, leisurely.

Katharine said with a smile, she had lived it. She lived in one of the oldest and most comfortable houses down on the Point. It was set in a small blue-shaded garden, a Norman turret was hung with ivy, and in summer candles draped mysteriously from its porch.

It was dark with seasoned oak, and the good smell of rambling roses, the stamping of her feet, the sound of her feet, the sound of her feet, the sound of her feet.

A glance at her watch now warned her that her hour was nearly ended. She was going to call on the doctor.

But Katharine, suddenly, no longer felt the need of a doctor. She was going to call on the doctor.

He had been looking at her over his shoulder, his gentle voice coming to her.

"You won't mind going, will you?" Katharine asked. "No, no, no," he said.

"The deep roll of distant thunder increased. They crossed an open meadow with a river meandering along and an orange flash of lightning looked across the sky.

Now the rain came down, suddenly, in torrents. In violent sheets. For the main part, the trees protected them, but soon the path again crossed a cleared road.

Great angry pools of thunder rumbled, and the sky was made livid by the almost continual flashes of lightning. The forest was nervous, fury danced on its thinned, refusing to proceed.

At the side of the road was a small blue-shaded garden, a Norman turret was hung with ivy, and in summer candles draped mysteriously from its porch.

Macdonald As New

MAY ENGINEER BRITISH - U.S. TEAM WORK

Closer Relations in All
World Affairs Task of Ex-Premier

LONDON, June 18.—The Herald's diplomatic correspondent said Monday that Ramsay MacDonald, former prime minister, may go to the United States as a special representative to discuss the possibilities of Anglo-American cooperation in world affairs.

The Herald said the idea was being seriously considered by the Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, foreign secretary Sir Samuel Hoare and Lord Anthony Eden, minister for League of Nations affairs. Hoare is expected to return from his tour of the United States in a few days. MacDonald might be "sent on an ambassadorial tour."

When the former prime minister arrived at Lonsdown the day after he resigned, he said he was there to regain his strength "for further action as great as ever." The visit was held in his quarters as a possible special task such as the American trip.

OBJECTOR IS EJECTED AT CIVIC MEET

Former Candidate Berates
Councilors as Tenders
Discussed

Losing his patience with Chas. M. Kelly, speaker at city council's special meeting of city council, when the latter interrupted the aldermanic debate on the death of the late Mayor Clarke, Kelly was ejected from the council chamber by a constable. Mr. Kelly yelled defiance at the aldermen even as he left the meeting place.

The grading contract was awarded to the Edmonton Traction Co. at a tendered price of $27,350.

WOLFE SPEAK
The flare-up occurred when Mr. Wolfe, a regular attendee at aldermanic board meetings, asked the mayor for permission to speak. He was refused.

Mr. Kelly then appealed to city council.

"Set down! I am sick and tired of you outsiders butting in and wasting the time of this council," said Mayor Clarke.

Ald. R. E. Foster remarked that he was talking with the council.

"These are 'washed' tenderers," Mr. Kelly declared.

Ald. J. A. Clarke called a police officer, who came from the rear of the chamber.

ORDERED OUT
This man could not command the mayor.

Kelly made no movement to go, remaining firmly in front of the aldermanic seats. The constable, who was ordered to leave, and forced him to leave the chamber.

"These tenderers are a 'plant'!" Kelly shouted, as he walked through the door.

An Independent Labor party member of the late Mayor Clarke's election campaign, Kelly was ejected from the council chamber by a constable.

OTHER TENDERS
Other grading tenders submitted were: Belyea Construction Co., $27,350; R. D. Moore & Co., $27,350; Smith, $5,387.

Referring to the low price submitted by the successful tenderer, City Engineer A. W. Hadow said the company had considerable grading equipment near the city's western base.

Paposes Drift
Fraser Rapids
In Leaky Boat

MISSION, June 18.—A Canadian mother and her two small children were rescued last night after the children had been rescued from a leaky canoe in which they had drifted some 35 miles on the Fraser.

Notified that the two children, the boy aged nine and the girl about seven, were drifting in the current of the spring freshet. John and Mary had been picked up in a canoe and finally picked them up at Mission Island.

They were taken to St. Mary's Indian school here, where they were found by the police, who had gone shopping and left the two alone.

Baden-Powells
Salmon Fishing

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., June 18.—The Baden-Powells, chief of the world's Boy Scouts, arrived here Monday for a week's fishing along the coast.

Next week the Scout and Girl Guide chief, Lady Baden-Powells, will come for more salmon fishing until June when they will return to St. Scotia, stopping at Halifax.

These Multiple-Mothers Reason Along Own Lines

KANSAS CITY, June 18.—Mrs. Jerome J. Burke took her eyes off mischievous three-year-old triplet boys just long enough Monday to say Mrs. Olivia Dionne doesn't know when she is well off.

Mrs. Dionne is opposed to having her quintuplet girls kept in a private hospital built by the government across the road from the home home in Callander, Ont.

Said Mrs. Burke, whose boys—Joe, Jerome and John—celebrated their birthdays Monday:

"You can imagine what it is like when one gets into a drawer and other into a washbasket and the third into the kitchen pans—all at once."

Sometimes, I believe that if the Dionne mother knew what she was doing she would leave her five babies in the street."

"But that is only when I'm discouraged."

LOCAL LABOR BACKS MARCHERS

Protest against the federal government's action in stopping the "Go to Ottawa" march at Regina was telegraphed to Premier R. B. Bennett by the Edmonton Trades and Labor Council Monday night.

A telegram pleading support to the marchers was also sent to the leaders of the unemployed at Regina.

This action was taken following representations made by a delegation of unemployed men, and was passed by the unanimous vote of the council.

E. E. Royer stated the march was the result of the "go to Ottawa" against the inhuman conditions imposed by capitalist governments. He was of the opinion that unless action was taken immediately to place these men in the unemployment camps, that a revolution might erupt to the welfare of Canada would result.

Carl Berg strongly supported the request that a protest be sent to the federal government, and expressed satisfaction at the part the international labor movement took in helping the marchers during their stopover in Calgary.

Twins Rackets

CITY FORCED TO AID FARM PLAN FAILURES

Further Participation in Provincial Plan is Questioned

Failure of some relief cases to make good while rehabilitating on farms under the farm settlement scheme generally meant that the city had to keep such cases when they returned to Edmonton, relief manager M. F. McKee told aldermen at a special meeting of council Monday.

Members of the committee are Ald. J. W. Fry, Mr. McKee, T. S. Magee, head of the city's permanent relief department, and S. Campbell, official of the direct relief branch.

The farm scheme is operated under a 50-50 arrangement with the federal, provincial and municipal governments contributing $500 each for each family sent back to the land, making a total of $800 for every family.

After the city had made this outlay of cash it should not be expected to keep unsuccessful cases who returned to the city, McKee said.

Over 200 would-be settlers have been sent out to farms and supplied with horses, a cow and a certain amount of agricultural equipment. Of the number, 12 have made good.

HORSES DIE
It was reported that 100 horses supplied cases which subsequently failed in land operation had died, due to a variety of causes.

Mayor J. A. Clarke said he was not going to allow any more cases to starve when they came back to Edmonton.

A brief history of the development of railway transportation was given by Mr. Till, who said that the railway was the first of the great "big" things that have made the world what it is today.

"Today," continued Mr. Till, "the railway is the most important contribution to the development of the world by the railroads was the opening up of transportation, making it possible to produce, railway transportation was the first of the great 'big' things that have made the world what it is today."
